Deliberately by him to establish that he was presenting academic material, not sensationalized ideas. Especially in that first literary output, I wanted to show that there is evidence to support his theories, and not only evidence, but also many evidence. When I read the book a few years ago, I was completely absorbed on page one. The interest of my uncle in the subject of ancient civilizations and human origins derived from his reading of the Hebrew Bible, or the Old Testament, in his original Hebrew, and then comparing what he had read with the translations into common English that more than not the sense was made. Most biblical scholars and archaeologists consider that ancient writings are allegory, myth, and/or legend, no matter whether the original writings of the Bible are of the Bible or are sumerian, Akkadian, Assyrian, Egyptian, Greek or Roman. Sitchin's premise was this: What if these old tales are not legend, myth or allegory? What if they're history? The incident that aroused his interest in this compelling question occurred when he was a schoolteacher in Israel during the time of the British mandate. His interest had been provoked at a crucial moment (which we will discuss later in the book) and a life spent on research, study of languages, travel and museum visits would occur. He accumulated so much fascinating evidence and developed so many fascinating theories and chorus ideas that his wife, Rina, encouraged him to stop talking and start writing. As a result, he became the author of fourteen volumes of non-fiction on the subject of ancient civilizations; the first of which, on the twelfth planet, was published in 1976. Sitchin led tours to see the places and ancient artifacts he mentioned in his books and began to do what he called Sitchin Studies seminars. I started attending the seminars to provide support, with the record or doing what I needed to do to do that things worked without problems. In these seminars, I was lucky to be able to hear him talk about the topics of his books and listen to the questions of his readers and the answers he gave. His words were always carefully chosen, since he did not want to imply or present any idea that he did not have extensive evidence and a firm conclusion in his mind about how the idea fits into the history of Anunnaki (those who came from the sky to the Earth). Recent readers often asked him to discuss several theories of other scholars, or to comment on aspects of the ancient civilization that had not investigated or written, or for which they did not have a only conclusion or sufficient evidence. In these cases, he invariably would find an educated way of rejecting and saying only what he knew it was true. This integrity was a large part of his character and one of the reasons why he was very respected and believing. His goal in writing was to share the information that he felt that it was of vital importance for all of us, as a human family, to know about our origins. He said he was a reporter, writing the history of Anunnaki registered by the ancient peoples. He had always the detractors and those who attributed ideas that he had never discussed, much less written. However, there were also readers and associates of all the lumbites of life that were presented with material that could help him with his research. Some of these collaborators of the scene were professionals who were worried that when their ideas were supported by their ideas or academic careers, they are dangerous or destroyed. Professional condemnation to think outside the
